Knowledge for Prevention (K4P) - From Early Warning to Early Action: Shaping the Global Child Protection Agenda

Name:

Knowledge for Prevention (K4P) - From Early Warning to Early Action: Shaping the Global Child Protection Agenda

Description:

Recognized as one of the worst forms of child labour, the recruitment and use of children continue to be a defining factor of conflict globally. The Knowledge for Prevention (K4P) project seeks to better understand the indicators that precede recruitment and the conditions that make some children more vulnerable to this abuse than others. By shaping the early warning to early action field, the project looks to provide timely alerts on situations where children may be at a heightened risk of recruitment to inform early and preventative action.

Implementation plan:

As part of our annual K4P international symposium, the Dallaire Institute for Children, Peace and Security will host a panel focused on the early warning indicators that precede the recruitment and use of children in the context of child labour. The panel seeks to mobilize discussion around prevention efforts within the child protection and recruitment prevention fields.

Impact:

By contextualizing recruitment prevention in the context of child labour, the Dallaire Institute seeks to create space for critical discussions on how early warning can be effectively translated into early and collaborative action to better protect children in conflict and fragile environments.
