End child labour in its supply chains

Name:

Ending child labour in our supply chains

Description:

Recognizing the negative impact of CSR issues on the operation process, we manage the risks of child labour, forced labour, human rights, environment, ethics, and suppliers at all production sites on an ongoing basis. We established a 5-step CSR risk management process using RBA's self-assessment tool.

Through the process of target selection, in-depth self-assessment, on-site assessment, consultation for improvement, third-party review, and progress monitoring, we preemptively identify and improve CSR risk factors at our production sites and supply chain around the world.

Implementation plan:

The Global Labor Policy has been translated and distributed in a total of 20 languages, including English and Chinese. LGE will continue to practice CSR by consistently improving its child labour, forced labour, and human rights-related processes.

Based on RBA Code, LGE established and declared its Supplier Code of Conduct in 2010 to assist its suppliers in fulfilling social responsibilities. We plan to expand our activity globally to help every supplier fulfill its social responsibility and achieve long-term competence.

LG Electronics operates a social contribution program that provides energy to students' families by installing solar charging systems in schools and encourage parents to send their children to class instead of having them work in a mine.

Impact:

We aim to end child labour in our supply chain by ensuring that sub-suppliers/sub-contractors have a child labour prevention and remediation system in their sub-tiers.
