

ORGANIZATION

Sympany, Netherlands
pledges to End child labour in post-consumer textile recycling (PCR) through a system change in its PCR value chain

SYMPANY, NETHERLANDS

End child labour in post-consumer textile recycling (PCR) through a system change in its PCR value chain

Name:

Ending Child labour in post-consumer textile recycling (PCR) through a system change in our PCR value chain.

Description:

- Developing an action plan that includes specific, measurable, action-oriented, realistic, and time-bound targets and actions to end child labour in the supply chain for post-consumer textiles recycling. The action plan indicates the responsibilities and roles of actors. Such action plan includes the commitment of Sympany to provide more transparency as to the actors in its supply chain for post-consumer textiles and engaging with its business chain partners on the topic of eradicating child labour.
- Independent verification in the post-consumer recycling value chain (local unions, producer organizations, local NGOs, peer control, etc.).
- Establishing a chain of custody process which is ready to be scaled up through collaboration with other chain partners.

Implementation plan:

We will address the possible prevalence of child labour in the value chain of post-consumer textiles and in meetings with the sector and in cooperation with our PCR value chain partners.

Impact:

We follow the flow of Post Consumer textile and map and monitor that no child is working in it and through an FBK project we establish a bridge school system and connection to the local education system to get all children of the workers in the PCR value chain at school.

Website